Bedtime Stories for the Apocalypse III

Skookum Apples

You survived the first two volumes of Joel Arnold's BEDTIME STORIES FOR THE APOCALYPSE...barely. Are you ready for volume 3? In this collection of 10 short stories you'll meet: A herd of cows protecting a dead woman from her abusive husband. A beached mermaid on the shores of Lake Superior. A group of friends whose love of Halloween keeps them together for a long, long time. A little girl who deals candy - and something far more sinister - from her bright red wagon. A teenager who must embrace the very dark side to survive a fate worse than death. A mysterious visitor who drives a man mad. These, plus four other stories, will keep you up late at night with a light on and your teddy bear screaming for mercy.

American Horticulture Society Award Winner The apple is one of the most iconic fruits, traditionally picked on cool fall days and used in pies, crisps, and ciders. And there is a vast world of varieties that goes beyond the common grocery store offerings of Red Delicious and Granny Smith. With names like American Beauty, Carter's Blue, and Fallwater, and flavors ranging from sweet to tart, this treasure trove of unique apples is ripe for discovery. There is no better guide through this tasty world than Tom Burford, whose family has grown apples in the Blue Ridge Mountains since 1715. The book is brimming with beautiful portraits of heirloom and modern apples of merit, each accompanied by distinguishing characteristics and common uses. As the view broadens to the orchard, you will find information on planting, pruning, grafting, and more. The exploration of the apple culminates with an overview of the fruit's transformative capabilities when pressed, fermented, cooked, or dried. Beyond the polished and predictable grocery store display of Red Delicious and Granny Smith apples, a feast of beautiful and uniquely flavored North American varieties awaits the curious.

From the preeminent writer of Taiwanese nativist fiction and the leading translator of Chinese literature come these poignant accounts of everyday life in rural and small-town Taiwan. Huang is frequently cited as one of the most original and gifted storytellers in the Chinese language, and these selections reveal his genius. In "The Two Sign Painters," TV reporters ambush two young workers from the country taking a break atop a twenty-four-story building. "His Son's Big Doll" introduces the tortured soul inside a walking advertisement, and in "Xiaoqi's Cap" a dissatisfied pressure-cooker salesman is fascinated by a young schoolgirl. Huang's characters—generally the uneducated and disadvantaged who must cope with assaults on their traditionalism, hostility from their urban brethren and, of course, the debilitating effects of poverty—come to life in all their human uniqueness, free from idealization.

In this memoir of small-county life, where emphasis is on character essential to the ethics of community, a young girl of robust curiosity keeps company with the spells her people cast. At the center of the book is a poetic and telling bond, and adoring friendship between this small white girl and a black foreman, Joe Collins. There's a tempestuous country-physician father, a beautiful powerful mother in powerless times, and the "wonderfully long-winded" Aunt Tott. We witness the travail of hired laborers as well as the beauties of craft and devotion in Holt Watson's rendering of traditional tobacco culture. A seven-year-old girl may set her buckteeth on fire or bite her pony, but never misses the silent rush of spring water deep within the greenest land, a land from which she, too, springs. Brimming with unsentimental innocence and the sensuality of furs, tobacco, and her mother's lemon lily beds, she draws a tough-minded, tomboy-accomplished portrait of a girlhood.

Having barely settled in to the hard, but satisfying, life on their Canadian homestead, John and Katy Bramwell are suddenly uprooted by the far-reaching tentacles of World War I. Then, soon after they relocate to the States, John inadvertently becomes the only suspect in the disappearance of an elderly local resident. Can he ever escape this cloud hanging over his head? Although the Bramwells often struggle just to provide the necessities of life for their steadily growing family, there is always plenty of love to go around. But will that be enough when tragedy comes calling? And what about Rosie, the oldest Bramwell daughter? From her first day in kindergarten, she has had her heart set on someday becoming a teacher. Will she keep that dream alive through the years or become disillusioned by the unsettling problems she witnesses in the crowded, one-room country school she and her siblings attend? A retired mathematics teacher, Thomas Seaver also coached cross-country and track & field in the small West Michigan city of Greenville. From the time he was just a boy, music has always played a prominent role in his life, and he presently enjoys composing and arranging songs for his gospel quartet. The author now resides in Kimball, Michigan, with his wife, Carol.
