The power of modern information systems and information technology (IS/IT) offers new opportunities to rethink, at the broadest levels, existing business strategies, approaches and practices. Over the past decade, IT has opened up new business opportunities, led to the development of new strategic IS and challenged all managers and users of IS/IT to devise new ways to make better use of information. Yet this era which began with much confidence and optimism is now suffering under a legacy of systems that are increasingly failing to meet business needs, and lasting fixes are proving costly and difficult to implement. General management is experiencing a crisis of confidence in their IS functions and in the chief information systems officers who lead them (Earl and Feeney, 1994:11). The concern for chief executive officers is that they are confronting a situation that is seemingly out of control. They are asking, 'What is the best way to rein in these problems and effectively assess IS performance? Further, how can we be certain that IS is adequately adding value to the organisational bottom line?' On the other hand, IS executives and professionals who are responsible for creating, managing and maintaining the organisation's systems are worried about the preparedness of general managers to cope with the growth in new technologies and systems. They see IT having a polarising effect on general managers; it either bedazzles or frightens them (Davenport, 1994: 119).

Summer isn't looking good for Alana Alcott, an urban teacher of gifted students. She's been court ordered to teach summer school with Outward Bound instructor Mike Reynolds. Their students? Five unruly foster kids whose stories of abandonment mirror Alana's own childhood more than she wants to admit. Mike, in particular, initially chafes on Alana's nerves. She sees him as an overgrown Boy Scout, promoting a nature-to-nurture philosophy that may or may not help their troubled students. And troubled they certainly are, with problems ranging from behavioral issues to a looming gang recruitment. As Mike and Alana struggle to help their young charges connect with nature in the bleak concrete landscape of the projects, the two teachers find themselves increasingly attracted to each other. The demands of their students, however, interrupt their blossoming romance at every turn. Alana, meanwhile, finds herself forced to confront her own past-and the mother who abandoned her. Over the course of one short summer, seven lives will change, for good or ill. If Mike and Alana can help it, their students will find hope and direction. Doing so, however, may mean putting their own happiness on hold-or sacrificing it forever.

The Indian rural market till long had been thought of as an inaccessible, unsubstantial market with limited purchasing power. This belief has prompted the marketers to blatantly evade the call of the rural markets. The truth of the matter is that all rural consumers are not poor. As revealed by a study conducted by NCAER, 'there are as many middle income and above households in the rural areas as there are in the urban areas'. The catch is that a sizeable portion of the rural consumer does not prefer to buy in bulk but have a propensity to buy in small amounts as and when required. This presses on the need for some change in the products, services and packaging and opens up a strong case in favour of innovation for the rural markets. Moreover the scattered and fragmented nature of the Indian rural markets makes distribution a cumbersome process. Unlike that in the urban areas, a member of the distribution channel in the rural area would end up catering to significantly lesser number of consumers in an area of comparable size. Establishing an intensively wide and deep distribution channel may not always be economically viable and profitable. This presents another scope for innovation for the marketer intending to penetrate into the rural markets. Other pertinent questions which may be answered through innovation are: how to sell profitably to the rural poor, how to reduce the cost of marketing communication and yet communicate more effectively with the rural masses, how to deliver an enhanced value to the consumers, what type of business models to develop for the rural markets, how to lower the price of the products and services for the rural consumers, how to make the products more cost effective and many more. The book attempts to give a brief account of the Indian rural market, explore the possibility of using innovation for penetrating into this market and point to and justify the suitability of some specific types of innovations for the rural market of India.

The solution is shown on page 239. Rest of the book is a step-by-step logical progression to the solution. Why? Last century has seen many crisis unfold, but the learning from them had not been applied to make our system, safer and secured. According to the author, the prevailing Financial Crisis resulted from a poor quality of information, running the global financial system. The author uses the 'information asymmetry' and 'information lifecycle' to put forth his argument. As this book extracts learning from this crisis, it explains how financial sector and other businesses can apply the concept of 'High Quality of Information' to run a 'crisis-proof- business. In this book, the author constructs the global financial architecture, that can resist crises in future. So, are we more wiser, living through the current crisis? What can the non-financial sector learn from this crisis? Make an assessment for yourself, using the C(X)O checklist at the end of the book.
